The Club Wheelock Mobile App Promotes the Art of Living

We are pleased to share with you Club Wheelock mobile application has been awarded the “e-brand awards 2018” by Hong Kong Economic Times and e-Zone on 15 Aug 2018, honoring “The Best of Lifestyle Platform App” nominated by general public and professional judging panel. Mr. Ricky K. Y. Wong, Managing Director of Wheelock Properties (Hong Kong) Limited said, “We are very honored and pleased to receive this award. We will continue to extend the innovative spirit and to provide professional and thoughtful services to our members for the support they have been giving us.”

Lifestyle and Mobile Integration

Club Wheelock’s members can show their exclusive e-membership cards anytime and anywhere to enjoy exclusive hotels & restaurants discounts, extra parking privileges at designated malls, fashion brand event invitations and gifts. Each e-membership card is equipped with a unique QR code. You can present the QR code to on-site staff for registration when you attend an event. In addition, we incorporated membership card and member information into the application, replacing the entity membership card, which saves a lot of administrative processing time. And all event attendance records are synchronized to our customer relationship management (CRM) system, allowing us to view each member’s lifestyle interests and brand preferences at a glance.

24 Hours Property Information Service

Another purpose of the “Club Wheelock” mobile app is to provide you with the newest property sales information and to share current lifestyle trends. Members can stay well informed of member privileges, latest news and property information through the app. Offers and information can be easily shared with family and friends through WhatsApp, WeChat and Facebook; whenever there are any updates, we can notify members through the app so that members will not miss a chance to experience finer things in life. Moreover, we have upgraded the system within the application, when members are interested in new properties, they can calculate the mortgage amount more conveniently.

Premium Social Platform

The incorporation of mobile app services is currently trending globally. We always value the communication with our members and hope to integrate “The spirit of living” into our members’ lifestyle. In fact, after years of interactive activities and events, we have established a strong relationship with our members and understand their interests in the art of living. However our events and activities are only held occasionally therefore we developed the mobile app to stay in touch with our members regularly. This premium social platform allows us to directly provide privileges, invitations to fashion events and receive exquisite gifts and to be shared instantly.

Sharing Home Interior Design

“Club Wheelock” mobile app will continue to enhance and soon can be infiltrated into every detail of the members’ lives, furthermore, it can be applied to their home styling interests. Visual Storytelling Hong Kong By Four Photo Enthusiasts

National Geographic in collaboration with Wheelock Properties recently held the “National Geographic Wheelock Hong Kong Photo Contest 2018.” This was an ongoing partnership and effort to promote Hong Kong photography. Before the new winners of the contest are born, we interviewed the winners of the previous National Geographic Wheelock Youth Photo Competition 2017 award who shared their photo shooting skills and the journey from scratch to stardom. Read the National Geographic Wheelock Youth Photo Competition 2017 winner interview for the 2017 award winners:

CW: Congratulations again to the winners of National Geographic Wheelock Youth Photo Competition 2017! Looking back, how did you feel when you won the prize?

L: I was pleasantly surprised and happy at the same time because I never imagined that I would win the prize. I think it is an honor to be recognized by National Geographic Magazine and Wheelock Properties Hong Kong. I have always loved the photos published by National Geographic magazine. Honestly, I can't stop thinking of that day when my work was published in this amazing magazine.

C: I was equally glad that my enthusiasm for photography has finally been recognized and I have continued to shoot more and better photographs and share my works with more people.

H: Just like other award winners, I felt happy but a bit amazed since my photography experience is very short and I did not imagine that I would win the award. I feel lucky to have won the award.

M: I have not been in the photography niche for so long like other competitors. So I did not expect to win the award. Honestly, I felt that I still had a bit of a learning curve ahead of me to complete before I could even dream of winning a prize. This was really a huge surprise and encouragement for me! Additionally, I would like to thank Eileen, a friend of mine, who played a major part in this.

CW: Where did you derive all that creative inspiration for your award-winning work? Did you previously plan the content of the winning photo or was it all by chance?

L: I have always liked taking landscape shots and to highlight the beauty of those locations, I would select the shooting location depending on the weather forecast and hope to capture the best shot. The weather was foggy that day and I had decided to go to the city and capture the foggy scene. But when I arrived at the waterfront, I found that the fog was too huge to take great pictures. When I thought that I would not be able to get the right shot, the wind blew the upper layer of the fog and all of a sudden scene became clear with more sunlight. So I took advantage of this phenomenal moment to capture the award-winning shot.

C: When Typhoon Hato hit Hong Kong last year, my father and myself went to observe the wind and the waves. In about 20 minutes or so, the perfect, huge wave came and I did not hesitate to take the momentous shot. I would say that this was by chance, catching the right moment at the right location and the basic photography skills that I had acquired over time.

H: My winning work was a similar occasion as Caleb. It was by chance that perfect moment came and the scene was very storytelling, therefore I immediately captured the moment.

M: I have always loved trams ever since I was a kid. But I heard rumors that the tram service in the Central Business District will be scrapped in the near future and I would like to see them forever! So I took many photos of the trams for future reminiscence and to keep the memories should they get scrapped.

CW: What shooting techniques did you apply to your award-winning photo, and would you also tell us about the coloring?

L: First, I used minimal ISO settings to make the photo clearer. Secondly, I used a fine aperture of 8/11 to create more depth to the photo. Thirdly, I turned the photo into black and white, allowing the audience to focus on the dynamic or static relationship of the image, and the expression of the lines as well as the artistic layering.

H: My work does not involve any special camera settings or operations skills as many viewers may think. To produce this award-winning photo, I only needed the most fundamental skill the shooting touch. As far as coloring goes, I used black and white. Just as Lee mentioned to focus on the capture.

M: Many viewers asked me how I achieved the red and blue lighting on both sides. Was it a retouching effect? NO! I am not a fan of retouching when it comes to photography. I stuck to the original color of the photo, but used double exposure when shooting. The hues on both sides were actually exposed by two different locations, giving a rise to this interesting effect.

C: When you look at this photo, you will instantly notice the sharp contrast against the other award-winning photos! The secret to this super realistic shot is the telescope of my cell phone. Then I also adjusted the color temperature to cool the feeling of the storm.

CW: National Geographic Wheelock Hong Kong Photo Contest 2018 is currently inviting new participants to sign up. What word of advice would you like to give to the would-be participants?

L: At the technical level, becoming an award-winning photographer is all about checking out different works and practicing more. If you do that, you will get it slowly. At the non-technical level, it is all about injecting your thoughts into your works to capture and express the beauty of things through the camera.

C: Do not over-rely on the mainstream photography themes. Do not shoot the sceneries that others have. Find inspiration from your own life. Capture people and things you hardly pay attention to.

H: The heart plays an essential role in photography! Shoot what you like and find creative inspiration. Then, make sure your photos carry certain emotions, or tell different stories. This is more important than all the technical aspects like clarity and so on.

M: Professional shooting is not about how sophisticated your equipment is! It is about breaking away from the monotony and doing things you have never done before with the camera.

A great photo entails composition, color and the photographer's emotions. By injecting your emotions, you can create an award-winning photograph even with a simple mobile phone camera. The four price- winning photographers above have proved it!
