Floral Therapy

Floral Jamming is a big hit in town recently, attracting many curious people to try. There are people who want to surprise their lovers with a handmade bouquet, while others just want to unwind and have some fun with friends. Club Wheelock held a flower talk with Lowdi Kwan, founder of Tallensia Floral Art, about Floral Jamming, and her life experience.

Floral Jamming, a new way of Art Therapy

Floral Jamming is regarded as a kind of art therapy as it helps to soothe out stress. During the course of art creation, rules and theories are somehow a source of pressure. One of the key features of Floral Jamming is that most rules and theories are set aside. Participants are encouraged to create their work solely out of their own wish. Most importantly, participants are given a chance to listen to the voice from the bottom of their hearts.

“Every piece of work should be treated as an art piece”

Back to around two years ago, Lowdi split her time between different international floral events as well as many private commercial projects. She set a very high standard for herself insisting that, “every piece of work should be treated as an art piece”. Quite often, she worked till late night and sometimes even skipped meals. However, one day, her body finally signaled that something was going wrong. At that point, she realized she might have overloaded her body with too much pressure. So she decided to take a break.

Lowdi with new friends on her recent trip in Spain

A Fresh, Brand New Start

During the break, Lowdi finally got a chance to unwind and rethink everything about her work and her life. It was the passion towards art and beautiful things that brought Lowdi to the stage of floral art. While art development starts changing to less abstruse, more about enjoyment, the idea of Floral Jamming by then rooted in her mind.

The first Floral Jamming event was a memorable experience. One of the participants was suffering from a fever, but he still insisted on attending. With all the flowers and other materials ready, Lowdi gave the participants a quick guide about how to select and categorize the materials, and then off they went to create their own floral pieces. It was the magic of Floral Jamming that brought every participant to world of flowers, as their stress melted over bunches and bunches of flowers. Finally when everyone got their floral pieces done, they appreciated others work and shared compliments with each other. When the event came to an end, the participant who had fever in the beginning found himself naturally cured. Knowing how to let go of pressure and worries is actually the best medication to lots of health problems.

Floral Jamming Hit

Over the past two years, people who have tried Floral Jamming all left with a big bunch of flowers in their hands and a big smile over their faces. The good word of mouth spreads quickly. Some of them keep coming back, bringing new friends in, while some of them continue to practice Floral Jamming at home.

The recent trip to Spain was rewarding for Lowdi. In addition to participating in the huge event organized by the government of Spain she also seized the chance to hold a Floral Jamming event, inviting local people to join. People were deeply impressed and enjoyed themselves.

Let the Flowers Speak

From the choice of flowers, to the arrangement to the time it takes to finish the floral piece, every step somehow tells a bit of one’s personality. A delicately-crafted flower bouquet must be created by a thoughtful and detail-minded person. While some people like to put together a bunch of flowers quite randomly and quickly – they are more likely to be the easy-going type.

Plants are just like human beings, each of them bears a different character. When asked to pick a plant that resembles her character, Lowdi points at an octopus-like, light green plant hanging by the window side, surprised by the funny and unfamiliar form, Lowdi explained “This is called an Airplant. It does not require soil to grow. It absorbs water from the air and can basically live on its own.” It is such an independent and tough creature that deserves a salute.

Club Wheellock members enjoyed a wonderful floral jamming party with lovely cupcakes and fine teas. Ms Lowdi Kwan, Chief Designer of Tallensia Floral Art, was delighted to share the concept of floral art therapy and demonstrated the floral arrangement techniques. Everyone discovered their talents and creativities of floral arrangement and brought their brilliant floral art pieces home as a memorabilia.

Situated at Wyndham Street, LARIS Modern Australian Cuisine is a new dining concept by celebrated Australian chef David Laris. The restaurant is elegantly decorated in a stylish yet unpretentious way. A big panel of window introduces a room of sunlight as well as the scene of historical old police station. Noted especially for his talent of blending different flavors and styles, David introduces modern dining with an Australian flair and global approach to LARIS.

Summer Fruit on the Menu - Iberico ham, compressed melon and pickles

Summer is abundant of succulent and mouthwatering fruits, durians, lychee, pineapples and mangos just to name a few. Cantaloupe is one of the juiciest and sweet fruit that can quench one's thirsty body. This dish showcases the perfect marriage of cantaloupe and savory iberico ham with a modern twist. The cantaloupe is compressed in a vacuum sealer with port wine. After soaking up the port wine, it changes to Burgundy red, and the texture becomes more intense. Slices of iberico ham and pickled radish are then layered on the cantaloupe, making a delectable summery appetizer.

The Call from Ocean Tasmania - Ocean trout tataki with slow cooked egg, XO sauce and keta caviar

Seafood is almost the synonymous of summer. It is a much lighter option than meat in muggy summer days. From Tasmanian Ocean, the sea trout is blowtorched gently to create the lightly charred and crispy outside while the middle remains a lovely pinkish-orange color. Keta caviar dotting the dish bursts with a subtle flavor of ocean. Yellow egg yolk is slowly cooked to silky smooth, creamy and mild. The classic Hong Kong XO sauce sprinkled on top is a wonderful kick to the dish. This is precisely how David beautifully blends different flavors and style around the globe in one dish.

Mid-summer Passion - Lime curd meringue tart with passion fruit

Passion fruit truly comes into its own during mid-summer. The sweet and sour fragrance awakens all your senses. The pulp of passion fruit is probably too sour to eat alone; more often is blended to a sauce that is perfect for cocktails or desserts. The soft meringue releases a distinctly tangy sweet and sour flavor. Together with the crunchy tart base, layers of textures and rich flavors dance in your mouth.

Craving satisfied, while the aromatic passion fruit still lingers on the palate, my mind starts to reminiscent the flavor of ocean trout tataki. Summer seems far away now.

Sizzling Summer

Mercury level rises to new highs every day, hot weather is draining everybody's appetite. Summer means refreshing fruity dishes and a lot of seafood fresh from the ocean. We have picked the following great summery dishes for you to enjoy. Let's get our taste buds freshened up and drive away the hot weather.
